Re History of slavery– Cabinet's response to the report 'Chains of the Past'

Dear Members of the Island Council,

Today, 19 December 2022, the Prime Minister, on behalf of the Government of the Netherlands, made apologies for the role of the historical predecessors of the Dutch authority in slavery.

In this matter, as the historical successor, the Government is fully aware of its administrative responsibility for the State of the Netherlands in its historical manifestations at the time. It makes these apologies for the role and involvement of our historical, administrative predecessors in the allowing, facilitating, promotion and continuation of, and benefiting from, slave trade and slavery, which have long and structurally undermined human dignity. Furthermore, for the fact that the successive governments since 1863 have demonstrated insufficient recognition of the fact that the slavery past has had a continued negative effect.

In slavery, people were deliberately reduced to trading goods and torn away from their environment and family ties in a way that was as abhorrent as it was inhumane. The Government fully recognises the immeasurable human suffering and honours those who resisted slavery. We can only look back on this past, with which we are all connected, with horror, remorse and shame. With this recognition of its administrative responsibility, the Government would also like to emphasise that society today, as such, cannot be held responsible for the acts committed in the name of the historical, administrative predecessors of the Dutch authority. At the same time, we cannot close our eyes to the negative effects of that history.

In his speech in St. Eustatius, State Secretary Van Rij for Finance emphasised that the Netherlands would like to continue discussions about what the history of slavery has meant to the island, and how the Cabinet can contribute to mending that today, and how we can continue to build on a common future.

Cabinet's response to the report 'Chains of the Past'

At the same time, the Government of the Netherlands has sent its response to the report 'Chains of the Past' by the Dialogue Group on the History of Slavery to the Eerste and Tweede Kamer. Enclosed please find that response, an English translation will be made available as soon as possible.

In its response to the report, the Government endorses the vision of the Dialogue Group that recognition of, and apologies for, the historical suffering are the basis for reparations today. Therefore, in the coming years, the Cabinet will commit to an integral package of measures that, together, will give a sustainable impulse to reinforcement of the knowledge and awareness, recognition and commemoration, as well as the continued effects of, and coming to terms with, the slavery past. This will be done, among other things, by contributing to the development of a slavery museum with a local impact on all the islands, a broad scientific study of the colonial slavery past of the Netherlands, the establishment of an independent Committee to oversee the detailing and organisation of a grand and dignified commemoration of the slavery past, the rehabilitation of Tula, and anti-discrimination measures. This does not alter the fact that there are also other things that are being done, and that there is still much to be done, to fight inequality. One may think of combating poverty, and improving education and access to good social security.

St. Eustatius

In St. Eustatius, the slavery past is literally immediately under the surface. "To dig in the ground here is to dig into history", as an inhabitant of St. Eustatius described the excavations of the cemeteries in St. Eustatius. These words were also quoted by the State Secretary Van Rij during his speech today on the island.

By apologising for the history of slavery, the Government of the Netherlands takes a first step in the direction of increasing the knowledge and awareness, recognition and commemoration, as well as the continued effects of, and coming to terms with, the slavery past. We have to learn from the past to be able to look ahead, so that we can work on a society where there is no room for racism and inequality of opportunity. In addition to the announcements already made in the Cabinet's response, I would like to make two promises to St. Eustatius on behalf of the Cabinet:

Lately, several discussion partners expressed to me, either by letter or orally, the wish to set up a memorial for the ancestors who had been excavated in St. Eustatius. On behalf of the Cabinet, my colleague, the State Secretary for Culture and Media, and I, will ensure that that memorial will be realised. The most important thing in this respect is that the Statian community will decide how and where the monument should be realised. For this promise, I would specifically like to address the Statia Cultural Heritage Implementation Committee (SCHIC), which was established in October of this year by the Public Entity of St. Eustatius. This Committee is to ensure that the community will be involved in the implementation of the recommendations of the Statia Heritage Research Committee (SHRC). Through its duties in respect of the Statian heritage and its connection with the community, this Committee constitutes the platform to shape this monument.

The SCHIC has been given an important task, namely to oversee the further implementation of the SHRC report on protection of Statian heritage. They will do so in close cooperation with the Statian community. I promise that the Cabinet will support the work of the Committee, to ensure that they will be able to do their work with an eye for all the cultural, spiritual and emotional aspects of the heritage and the community. That support may include amongst others, technical or financial support.

The Cabinet's response emphasises that we value a close cooperation with the Caribbean Islands in the development of the national slavery museum. That cooperation is not a one-way street, but should come about with a local impact on all the islands.

Fund and Committee

In order to support social initiatives, the Cabinet will set up a Fund. It is emphasised that this should be worked out in concrete detail in dialogue with, and for the benefit of, the Caribbean part of the Kingdom and Suriname, which, through this shared past, are forever connected with the Kingdom.

To fund the package of measures, the Cabinet intends to make a total amount of EUR 200 million available. Furthermore, the Cabinet intends to make an annual contribution of EUR 8 million available for the establishment and support of the activities of the Committee to be set up.

Slavery Memorial Year (1 July 2023 - 1 July 2024)

The history of slavery is a very painful, important, and underexposed aspect of our shared past. Starting next year, from 1 July 2023 to 1 July 2024, the whole Kingdom will pay extra attention to this aspect during the Slavery Memorial Year.

The National Institute for the Study of Dutch Slavery and its Legacy (NiNsee) intends to mark the grand opening of the Slavery Memorial Year in June and July 2023, and to mark its closing in July 2024. NiNsee intends to start a dialogue with Aruba, Bonaire, Curaçao, Saba, Sint Eustatius and Sint Maarten about a joint marking of this grand opening and closing.

In addition, the Cabinet will make an amount of EUR 2 million available for the organisation of activities during the Slavery Memorial Year. This will be implemented through two cultural funds: the Mondriaan Fund and the Cultural Participation Fund. It is stressed that these grant schemes are also available to initiators in the Caribbean part of the Kingdom. Applications can be submitted in Papiamentu, Papiamentu, English or Dutch.

The Cabinet envisages a year in which the entire Kingdom will feel included and which will create a connection that will last until long after the end of the year. We would like to invite Aruba, Bonaire, Curaçao, Saba, Sint Eustatius and Sint Maarten to make a contribution, as they see fit.

Common future

The apologies made by the Government of the Netherlands mark the beginning of a process that we would like to go through together with the Caribbean Netherlands and the Caribbean Countries of the Kingdom. The first step in the process are the apologies, with which the Government wishes to account for the horrible suffering that its historical predecessors caused. We thereby wish to use the Slavery Memorial Year to develop further plans together with all the parties involved.

This process will, however, not end after 1 July 2024, but will form the basis for a common future. A common future in which we can look back on the past with an open mind, and look ahead to a future that is based on knowledge and awareness, recognition and commemoration, as well as the continued effects of, and coming to terms with, the slavery past.

Yours sincerely,

State Secretary for the Interior and Kingdom Relations,

Alexandra C. van Huffelen
